LIGHT BREAKING!

Out of the Valley of Death.

The President Steadily Improving.

Continued Anxiety of the People.

Cheerful Morning Bulletin.

Everybody Encouraged.

The contrast between ten o'clock last night and seven o'clock this morning in the vicinity of the White House was marked. At the first-named hour the streets were thronged with people and anxiety was depicted on every countenance. This morning the crowd standing around the front of the Mansion was informed of a

Perceptible Change in the President's Condition
for the better, which they heard with evident relief. The feeling of anxiety began yesterday afternoon.

After 3 o'clock, when the bulletin was issued announcing that the President's condition was still favorable, a large crowd of people thronged the thoroughfares leading to the Executive Mansion. By some means the impression arose that the President had been sinking all day, and those in the neighborhood of the White House began to grow dubious and restless. The physicians asserted that the President was no worse, but the preoccupied looks of all who came from above stairs, however, and the fact that all but a few were rigidly excluded from going up at all did not tend to confirm any hopeful assertions. With people on the outside, too, the impression was beginning to gain ground that the

Physicians were Not Holding to the Strict Truth in their bulletins, but were holding something back. Marshal Henry, of the District, an Ohio man and personal friend of the President, was the first to give voice to the suspicion, and it gradually became strengthened in the evening until every one was worked up to the pitch of anxiety.

The people at once gave up the President's case as hopeless, and all sorts of wild rumors were sent out. Among others was the announcement that the Cabinet and Justices of the Supreme Court had been summoned, and the President was about to perform his last official act in calling Congress together in special session, so as to prevent any trouble after his death. This and other rumors, while they aroused a great deal of excitement for the time being, were finally found to be fabricated, and being so pronounced the excitement subsided.

The half-past ten o'clock bulletin published in an extra edition of THE CRITIC, to the effect that there was a change for the better caused a thinning out of the crowd, and at 11:15 o'clock only a few remained standing around conversing in groups. About that time Secretary Windom and wife, Secretary Kirkwood, District Attorney Corhill, Congressman Robeson and Col. Corbin left the mansion. Each one spoke and said they had reason to believe that he would recover. The house was then closed, and two policemen stationed on the portico to keep away intruders. No one was admitted except members of the press with special pass.

During the afternoon yesterday the physicians administered a hypodermic injection and a strong opiate to the President, in order to make him sleep. This caused the patient and act as though his mind was affected. He was in such a state for an hour, and a rumor got out that he was delirious.

To Talk Incoherently.

The First Favorable Indication occurred about 11:15 last night. But an hour before the fears were greatest and the apprehensions most grave. About that time, however, the President seemed to gather in second wind, as it were, and called for something to eat. He ate chicken broth and said after finishing that he felt like a new man and would take a nap. He wanted to converse, but was forbidden. He slept well and soundly, and

This Morning Was Greatly Improved.

His pulse has at 8:20 descended to 100, and his general condition is both easier and more favorable.

The President Himself Confident.
Mr. Brown, private secretary, told Gen. Boynton that the President now feels perfectly confident of recovery, and the entire household are greatly relieved in mind.

Gen. Corbin, who assiduously devoted his time to his friend, the President, and has hitherto almost despaired of his recovery, was last night so perfectly satisfied with the favorable change that he drove to his residence at Mount Pleasant and spent a short time with his family.

This morning Mrs. Garfield was very hopeful and well-spirited. She said to Mrs. Secretary Blaine, who seemed still somewhat fearful of results, "Keep up your courage; all will be well yet."

The President's Son James
visited him this morning. The patient shook hands with the boy, giving his hand a hearty grasp, and said that he was feeling much refreshed and stronger. The boy was overjoyed with delight, and very soon slipped quietly from the house and hastened to the mansion of Secretary Windom, where he gave the joyful tidings to his sister Mollie.

Dr. Agnew's Dream.

Dr. D. Hayes Agnew, who was at the President's bedside yesterday, and who left for Philadelphia yesterday afternoon, stated last night that the great danger to be apprehended in President Garfield's case was from peritonitis, and the patient was just entering upon the stage in which that might be dreaded. A wound through the liver was not necessarily a mortal wound, though as a rule such wounds resulted fatally. Out of 100 or 170 cases of similar wounds during the war, it was reported, Dr. Agnew said, that twenty-three were successfully treated.

Deep Gratitude of Mr. and Mrs. Garfield.

Secretary Blaine yesterday evening furnished the following, with a request that it be given the widest possible circulation:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, July 4, 11 p. m.

To the Press:

On behalf of the President and Mrs. Garfield, I desire to make public acknowledgment of the very numerous messages of condolence and affection which have been received since Saturday morning. From almost every State in the Union, from the South as bountifully as from the North, and from countries beyond the sea, have come messages of anxious inquiry and tender words of sympathy in such numbers that it has been found impossible to answer them in detail. I therefore ask the newspapers to express for the President and Mrs. Garfield the deep gratitude which they feel for the devotion of their fellow-countrymen and friends abroad in this hour of heavy affliction.

JAMES G. BLANE,
Secretary of State.

Telegrams of Condolence continue to pour into the White House from all points. Even far-off Japan sends words of sympathy to the American people in their affliction, and yesterday Mr. Yoshida, the Japanese Minister, received the following telegram from Tokio:

"The dispatch announcing an attempt on the life of the President has caused here profound sorrow, and you are hereby instructed to convey in the name of His Majesty to the Government of the United States the deepest sympathy and hope that his recovery will be speedy. Make immediate and full report regarding the sad event."

WOODYEN,
Minister for Foreign Affairs.

The Society of the Cincinnati, bishops of the Catholic Church, distinguished citizens of foreign countries, Governors of States, prominent men and women of our own land, colleges and seats of learning, in fact, all classes and conditions of individuals and societies, seem to be imbued with but one feeling, and that is sympathy for the distinguished victim and horror and detestation of the wretch who has inflicted all this misery upon the President, his family and the country.

8:30 A. M.

The Case Much More Favorable--The President's Condition Today.

The President has passed a comfortable night, and his condition this morning is decidedly more favorable.

There has been no vomiting since 8 o'clock last night, and he has been able to retain the liquid nourishment administered. There is less tympanitis and no abdominal tenderness, except in the wounded region. Pulse 114, temperature 105, respiration 24.

D. W. BLISS,
J. K. BARNES,
J. J. WOODWARD,
ROBT. REYBURN.

Should the President's condition continue as it is at present, no further bulletin will be issued before 1 o'clock.

Everybody Cheerful With Hope.

The Cabinet officers and others who called at the White House after the 8:30 bulletin was issued expressed themselves as decidedly more hopeful of the President's recovery than they were last night.

Mrs. Garfield, as well as the other ladies who have been in attendance on the President since the shooting, feel very much more encouraged than they did last night when the alarming bulletin of 7:45 was issued.

Secretary Kirkwood's Joy.

When Secretary Kirkwood drove up to the White House this morning the newspaper men in the lobby were eagerly scanning the bulletin. "What news," said the Secretary. "Good," said THE CRITIC. "Oh! I am so glad," responded the tender-hearted Secretary.

Sunshine Coming to All.

Postmaster General James and Mrs. James entered the White House immediately after 9 o'clock, and upon being told that the President was improving and bid fair to spend a comfortable day, their faces brightened up and they hurriedly made their way to the doctors' rooms to hear the news confirmed.

A LEAN Virginian named Samuel Fraser was fined $5 by Judge Smedley to-day for attacking a negro boot-black in this city with a knife. The boot-black, named Tinker, was standing at Sixth street and Pennsylvania avenue yesterday, and it is alleged, made a remark derogatory to the President, when the Virginian, who was passing, attacked him, cutting his clothes, and the negro narrowly escaped serious wounds.

The Lorry, Page County, Advance says: "What better man could the Conservatives nominate for Attorney-General than Linden Kent, of Alexandria. Mr. Kent is a man of ability, and no man in the 2d district worked harder, or accomplished more than Linden Kent for John S. Barbour, and the 18th of May ticket. The valley counties should consider this popular gentleman's claims. Linden Kent so completely demolished Gen. James H. Williams in the last canvass that the General seems to have gone into retirement." Mr. Kent is a popular and well-known lawyer of this city and Alexandria.

Piscataquis County, Maine, has no jail. It would seem to need one, however, in view of a horrible murder recently committed there.

No Ice.

Prentiss' concentrated lemonade is sold at the corner of Seventh and F streets.

A CRISIS PASSED.

Prospects Brightening.

The President and His Friends Cheerful.

A CRISIS PASSED.

Dr. Bliss Says the President Has Passed Through One of His Most Critical Stages.

Mr. O. L. Judd to-day sent the following dispatch to Don A. Pardee, New Orleans; Hon. Amos Townsend, Ottawa, Mich.; and other personal friends of the family:

"Marked and favorable change in President's condition since last night. Dr. Bliss admits that he has passed one of the most critical stages; by no means out of danger, but there is firmer ground for hope."

Secretary Kirkwood sent the following to Governor Gear, of Iowa.

"The President has passed a comfortable night, and his temperature, 100.50; respiration, 24."

Postmaster-General James sent the following dispatch to-day to Hon. Wm. Mahone, Petersburg, Va.; Hon. Ben. Le Fevre, Ohio; Hon. Thurlow Weed, New York; Hon. H. G. Pearson, New York; Hon. E. Prentiss Bailey, Utica, N. Y.:

"Marked and favorable change in the condition of the President. He passed a very comfortable night, and is refreshed and strengthened. Let us thank God and take courage."

In a similar dispatch to Hon. Warner Miller, of New York, the Postmaster-General adds: "Dr. Bliss admits that he (the President) has passed one of the most critical stages."

Cabinet Ministers at Their Departments.

Most of the Cabinet officers left the White House for their respective departments at 11 o'clock feeling very cheerful. Secretary Kirkwood, as he made his exit, said: "The President's chances for recovery are infinitely better at this time than they have been yet."

Secretary Hunt said: "I am very much gratified at the way things have changed since last night."

Postmaster-General James remarked that he had never entirely given up all hope and was now more than confident that the President would steadily improve and finally get well.

Secretary Windom, upon leaving the White House, told a CRITIC reporter that he was going to his office, feeling confident that the President was decidedly better and would steadily improve. Attorney-General MacVeagh feels very sanguine.

Sir Edward Thornton, Register Bruce, Col. Robt. Ingersoll, Justice Harlan, Secretary Windom, Congressman Money, of Mississippi, and Wilson, of West Virginia, were early callers at the White House this morning.

Held as a Witness in the Guitau Case.

This morning Thomas J. Cullen was brought into the Criminal Court, and was held in his own recognizance for $1,000 to appear from day to day in the case of Charles Jules Guitau, now in jail for shooting President Garfield. The detectives (Coomes and Acton) who brought the witness into court would not permit him to converse with the members of the press.

Human Vultures Hovering About the White House.

One fact connected with the attempted assassination of the President is the great concern manifested for his recovery by a lot of hungry federal office-seekers. These persons are not alone confined to residents of the District, but men, whose applications for appointment are on file at the White House, have come here from distant sections of the country in a state of dread and apprehension of the President's death. It is to be regretted, but it is nevertheless a fact, that the hope of securing their appointments is the basis of the extreme interest these people express for the President's fate. Some have so arranged it that they can gain admission to the Executive Mansion at all times. They are seen continually hanging around there, and, to say the least, the sight of them to those who are fully aware of their motives is simply disgusting.

Telegrams Pouring In.

Telegrams continue to pour in from all sections and the wires connecting with the White House are kept busy all the time. Messrs. Judd and Montgomery, the operators, are overrun with work, which has increased to such an extent that it became necessary to remove the telegraph instruments to a larger room. The regular telegraph office is too small and contracted to be of any service in an exigency like the present.

DEPARTMENT GOSSIP.

Officials Uneasy Over a Possible Change of Administration.

Business was resumed to-day and work in the Departments started up again, but in view of the terrible events of the past few days very little was accomplished in official circles. Secretary Windom was at the Treasury at times during the day, and all the other Cabinet officers except Secretary Blaine dropped into their Departments, but neither had heart to deal much with outside matters while still hung in the balance. Constant inquiries after the condition of the President's health were made during the day and everywhere a gloomy sadness prevailed, slightly relieved by that the President would recover. There never has appeared here before such a universal sentiment of regret as that shown for President Garfield, and at no time was it better perceptible than to-day.

The Life of the President

The Least Ray of Hope

A Feeling Akin to Dread prevails in departmental circles over the bare possibility of Gen. Arthur's becoming President. Those who feel that way are quite outspoken, too, in their opinion of what the future would be. "I am confident," remarked a Treasury official to a representative of THE CRITIC, "that should Arthur succeed to the Presidency, all of the present members of the Cabinet would resign." The issue between the element represented by Arthur and that represented by President Garfield is of such a nature that the present Cabinet cannot afford, before the people, to go back on the stand they have taken with their chief. It will mean nothing more or less than a third-term administration," he added, "as Grant will manipulate the whole machine."

One hideous feature of the attack upon the President is presented by the appearance here of a small army of New York stock gamblers. They are said to have come here for speculating purposes, using the probable chances for the life or death of the President as a basis for exciting Wall street. One of them is reported to have made a big strike through private negotiations Saturday, by telegraphing to certain hangers-on in Wall street that the President could not possibly survive his wound. It is stated that they have sent off various false and unwarranted dispatches in their reprehensible mode of creating a ripple in stock markets.

THE DOCTORS ENCOURAGED.

An Official Statement Sent to the Consulting Physicians.

The following dispatch was sent by the surgeons in charge to the two consulting physicians:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, July 5, 9:30 a. m.
After you left the urgent symptoms continued; there was much restlessness, constant slight vomiting, and by 8 o'clock p. m. the President's condition seemed even more serious than when you saw him. Since then his symptoms have gradually become more favorable. There has been no vomiting or regurgitation of fluid from his stomach since 8 o'clock last evening. The President has slept a good deal during the night, and this morning expresses himself as comparatively comfortable.

The spasmodic pains in the lower extremities have entirely disappeared, leaving behind, however, much muscular soreness and tenderness to the touch. There is less tympanitis and no abdominal tenderness whatever, except in the hepatic region. Since 8 p. m. he has taken an ounce and a half of chicken broth every two hours. Altogether but one half a grain of morphia has been administered hypodermically during the last twenty-four hours, and it has been found quite sufficient. His pulse, however, still keeps up. At 8:30 a. m. it was 114, temperature 100.5, respiration 24. Seventy-two hours have now elapsed since the wound was received. We cannot but feel encouraged this morning, although, of course, we do not overlook any of the perils that beset the path towards recovery. The course of treatment agreed upon will be steadily pursued.

D. W. BLISS,
J. K. BARNES,
J. J. WOODWARD,
ROBT. REYBURN.

The Quarrels of the Physicians.

The trouble between the various physicians who have had anything to do with the President's case has become a topic of more than ordinary interest here, and some hard things have been said in accusation of Dr. Bliss, in charge of the case. Certain physicians, who were called in, inaugurated a disgraceful controversy because of the publicity of signing their names to the bulletins. Some of these gentlemen, who were subsequently dropped from the case, reported that the President was being improperly treated, and that he would surely die. Efforts were made to prejudice Mrs. Garfield's mind against Dr. Bliss and the other physicians in charge, and this was the occasion of sending for Dr. Agnew, of Philadelphia, and Dr. Hamilton, of New York. These eminent physicians have indorsed the treatment which the President has thus far received. The majority of the physicians dropped from the case say that they do not consider that they have been discourteously treated; that they consider there were too many physicians called in at first, anyhow, and that they consider the controversy started by the chagrined doctors simply disgraceful.

To-day is in fact the quietest day passed at the Executive Mansion since the shooting. A sense of security prevails everywhere and hope shines in the faces of all. The Cabinet officers make frequent calls and their ladies are on hand most all the time.

Garfield's Last Signature.

Hon. Simon Wolf, whose commission was signed by President Garfield late last Friday, visited the White House this morning and came away feeling more cheerful, as the report was so encouraging. He was to have left to-day. He says if the President continues to improve, he shall leave on Thursday. He says the President's blessing has been ringing in his ears constantly since this terrible event. When General Garfield handed him his commission he says: "God bless you, my boy; may your find your mission as satisfactory to yourself as it seems to be to your friends here."

Secretary Bell, of the Interior, and Mr. Adolph Chase had quite a long talk with Mr. Wolf. Their expressions of anxiety and sympathy for the suffering President were deep and heartfelt.

Dr. Townsend's Opinion of the Case.

Dr. Townsend, the Health Officer of the District, said to THE CRITIC this afternoon that the staying power of President Garfield was the most wonderful in the history of his experience. He said that from the first he was almost completely convinced that the wound would prove fatal, but has hopes to a certain extent, since the favorable change of last night. At the same time, however, he considered it premature and unwise to predict a recovery as a certainty. The chances were not at all certain and much was still to be dreaded while hoping for the best.

The President's Condition at 3 P. M.

BOUND TO PULL THROUGH.

The President of Good Cheer and Encouraging His Friends.

The President's strength of will and heroism are conspicuous to an almost incredible degree. About 4 o'clock this morning, in response to an inquiry as to how he felt, he said: "My good friends, be of good cheer. I am

And Mean to Pull Through."

Commissioner Dudley, who is an intimate friend, was admitted last night to the President's room. He was recognized and beckoned to come to the bedside. "Dudley, I'm glad to see you," said the sick man; "I know you've come here to see Garfield and not the President."

Anxious to Live, But Ready to Go.

"I am very anxious to live, indeed, and if necessary I could let them cut my limb off inch by inch. Still, if I have to die, I'm ready to go. Keep your courage up."

The President frequently chats and jokes with those about his bedside. Colonel Rockwell and Judge Swain are his most constant attendants, though Private Secretary Brown goes in every few minutes when the rush of business surrounding him will permit. The President is devoted to Mr. Brown and likes to have him near his bedside all the time. The following is told as an evidence of the President's cheerfulness: He was when Judge Swain, said jokingly, "General, if you don't stop talking so much, I will shut the door and not let any one come in for you to talk to." The President smiled and said he wouldn't do so any more.

Chatting Away at a Lively Rate.

What the Spaniards Think of the Crime.
